

STG Posts Detention Health Information for Staff Development

October 27, 2009 – STG International (STG) is proud to announce a new program for continuing education, staff development, and professional certification aimed at STG’s healthcare staff that works at detention centers for the Division of Immigration Health Services (DIHS). The program has several different components, all of which focus on increasing the knowledge and expertise of STG’s medical and technical staff, and increasing our ability to support DIHS’ mission.

The first component, website updates, leverages STG’s intranet by posting educational and informational documents of particular relevance to the detention health environment. These website updates include H1N1 weekly updates from the Association of State Correctional Administrators (ASCA). These updates include a wide range of information, including checklists, “questions and answers” the latest information from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), as well as links to other sites of interest. Also posted are the most recent updates from the National Conference on Correctional Health Care (NCCHC).

The second component is an expansion of STG’s continuing education program by actively supporting our staff in obtaining NCCHC’s certification program. This certification program, which is the premier national certification program for professionals in correctional health care, provides STG staff with increased knowledge and identification as leaders in the complex and ever-changing field of corrections and detention health care.

Says Michelle Lee, STG’s owner and CEO: “We are proud to participate in NCCHC’s certification program, and to continue to provide high-quality staff and services to DIHS in support of its mission of health services delivery to support the enforcement of immigration law and maintain national security. As one of only a few contractors that work closely with DIHS, we are positioned to continuously improve our delivery of services, and ensure the highest-quality services and staff. We are very grateful for the opportunity to serve and support DIHS”.
