STG International, Inc. President and CEO Named to Washington Business Journal list of 2006 Women Who Mean Business

– The 25 honorees Represent Women from Every Industry and Profession –

Alexandria, VA – Nov. 7, 2006 – Michelle Lee, President and CEO of STG International, Inc., a premier provider of professional, medical and technical services to the federal government, was named to the Washington Business Journal Women Who Mean Business list. The 2006 Women Who Mean Business honorees represent women from every industry and profession, women who've made a difference in their communities and are leaving a mark on Washington business. This is the third consecutive year for Women Who Mean Business and STG's first nomination.

Michelle Lee founded STG International in 1997 in the basement of her home. Today, she has grown the company into a multi-million dollar enterprise, spanning two thirds of the country with more than 1,000 employees. Her expertise to recruit, retain and motivate superior employees is a key to her success. Her mission statement to “invest the time to understand customer's requirements and provide professional services that enable each one to successfully deliver on commitments to support health, security and the general well being of citizens” shows that community support is her core value. She is committed to not only serving the local DC community, but every community that STG reaches, which includes 33 states and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Michelle S. Lee,
 President and CEO,
 STG International, Inc.

“I am privileged to be included as a Women Who Mean Business honoree,” said Michelle Lee. “Community involvement is very important to STG and it's very important to our growth as an organization. I look forward to where we go from here.”

“These women are the pioneers in the region – the ones who blazed the trail for the rest of us to follow,” said Publisher Alex Orfinger, Washington Business Journal. “They're working in the highest levels of some of the region's largest enterprises, in small entrepreneurial businesses and at organizations focused on making our community a better place. Their contributions to business and community in Greater Washington are extraordinary.”
