

Michelle S. Lee Honored by Virginia Governor and First Lady at Women in Business Reception in Richmond

Alexandria, VA, July 26, 2011 – Michelle S. Lee was honored as an outstanding Virginia Woman in Business at a reception hosted by Virginia Governor Bob McDonnell and his wife, First Lady Maureen McDonnell. The cocktail reception was held on Monday, July 18th and honored women from throughout the Commonwealth who have made significant contributions to Virginia businesses.

Hosted at the Governor's Mansion, the nearly 120 honorees and guests gathered to hear the Governor and First Lady speak about the key position women hold in creating and advancing Virginia businesses. The group of honorees was comprised of women business leaders from all over Virginia whose businesses varied from construction to organic food farming and supply.

"I believe in the First Lady's mission to support and emphasize the value of women in Virginia businesses," said STGi CEO and President Michelle S. Lee, "and I am very honored to have been recognized as one of those women." As one of her chief philanthropies, Ms. Lee is active in organizations that promote women in business, and she especially supports the mission of organizations that focus on women entrepreneurs.

The July 18th reception to honor women in business was the first of its kind, though First Lady Maureen McDonnell said that she will continue to recognize and emphasize the presence of Virginia women as a valuable asset to businesses in the Commonwealth. Mrs. McDonnell has determined that supporting women in business and recognizing their achievements will be a major initiative during her tenure as Virginia's First Lady. The First Lady's three other initiatives are health and wellness, economic development, and supporting military families.
